Overview

Among Pronto's Play Store complaints, one pattern is steady: 1 in 7 says no partner was assigned, often on a booking made a day ahead. Pronto's policy already offers a full refund or free reschedule when a partner is unavailable; the reviews suggest customers don't always experience it that way.

Why this matters

A scheduled booking is a plan: customers book a day ahead and arrange their day around it. When the time moves forward instead of a partner being assigned, they can't tell whether to wait or make other plans, so they reach for support. 41% of these complaints mention trying to reach support, against 28% of other Pronto complaints.

Make assignment visible, and the fallback automatic

1 Book only where a partner is likely

Before payment, check partners near the address for that slot. Where supply is thin, show the nearest slot that is covered.

2 An assignment deadline

If no partner is assigned 60 minutes before the slot, offer the choice up front: next covered slot, instant credit or refund, with free cancellation.

3 Honest live status

"Priya is assigned, arriving 12:30" or "Still finding a partner, we'll confirm by 11:30", instead of the time moving forward.

4 Protect pass visits

A visit missed because no partner was assigned goes back to the pass automatically, and validity moves by a day.

Pronto's cancellation policy already promises a full refund or free reschedule when a partner is unavailable. These ideas are about customers getting that without asking.

How I'd know it worked Share of scheduled bookings with a partner assigned 60 minutes before the slot, by city, every week. Guardrail: bookings taken don't fall sharply when only covered slots are sold.
