Google Play complaints

2 Jun – 26 Sep 2026

Overview

Most complaints about slice aren't about bugs. Of the 785 complaints since June that name a specific problem, 58% are about a decision on the account: an account on hold, credit declined or a limit at zero, or a KYC that didn't go through. Many users say they weren't sure why, or what to do next.

What the reviews show

Why this matters

Every bank has to say no sometimes. What shapes how customers feel is how it's communicated: payments that pause without notice, a purchase power that shows ₹0 after on-time repayments, a KYC call that ends without a reason. Each one leads to a support chat, then an email, then a low rating.

These customers aren't leaving for a competitor's feature. They want clarity, which is cheaper to provide.

Context: since 21 Aug, 23% of all slice reviews were 1★–2★ (average 4.0★ across 2,000 reviews).

"no late payment issue, no other issue but 0 borrow"

"After repaying also their purchase power is 0. Also they don't tell the exact problem"

"incoming/deposit transactions have been disabled for almost 1 year, and the issue is still not resolved"

Every decision comes with a reason and a next step

- 1 One status card for every blocked state: receiving paused, account on hold, KYC rejected, purchase power at ₹0. What happened in plain words, what the customer can do, how long it usually takes, and a reference number.
- 2 For credit: show the factors that affect purchase power (repayment history, income verification, account age) and a date to check again, without exposing the risk model.
- 3 For freezes: upload requested documents in the app and track the review like a delivery.
- 4 Support sees the same card, so a chat starts from the case.

Some reasons, such as fraud or anti-money-laundering reviews, legally can't be shared. The card can still show the timeline and the next step.

How I'd know it worked Support contacts per blocked or rejected customer.
